BTW
TONIC WATER
...the way gin intended

Borne of a passion for quality spirits, traditional methods & a super tasty beverage, BTW is the UK's first small batch tonic water.

In the 17th Century, Spanish colonists in Peru discovered a cure for malaria in the bark of the Quina Quina tree. By 1825 British officers in India were administered regular doses of quinine syrup. This was so intense & bitter that the soldiers took to mixing it with gin & water, the gin & tonic was born. By 1858, Erasmus Bond was the first person to make & sell carbonated quinine water, marketing it, quite fittingly, as a 'tonic'. Before long it became the soft drink of choice in Victorian England.

It is in this birth of tonic water & the history of the gin & tonic that BTW shows its provenance. BTW is skilfully crafted to a traditional Victorian recipe in the heart of Bermondsey. Unlike commercially available tonics, BTW uses naturally occurring quinine from the bark of the Cinchona tree as opposed to a quinine extract. The use of the bark & part filtering results in a sunset golden hue colour.

The inspiration came when Nick Crispini & Lawrence Mason were compiling the gin listing here at 214 Bermondsey. They found that too many gins stood up incredibly well served on their own or in a Martini but were somewhat stripped of their individuality & distinctiveness when mixed with commercially available tonic waters.

Many people love a good G&T but would openly admit that tonic can be overly sweet yet cloyingly bitter. It's these overpowering elements that mask the delicate flavours of the botanicals in the gin. BTW is a smoother offering with delicious earthy flavours directly from the Cinchona bark. On top of this, by allowing the gin to shine through you can really appreciate the wonderful subtleties created by the distiller.

BTW is therefore a tonic for tradition, for those concerned with provenance & above all else for those who love their gin. It can be purchased in pre-carbonated ready to drink bottles & is also available in the syrup form & just requires to be mixed with soda, gin & ice. In this incarnation it also makes a fantastic cocktail ingredient.
